Six Persons Die In Connecticut Flood

NORWICH, Conn. (AP)—Debris, mud and grief served as grim evidence of a flood that burst through this old New England mill town. Six persons lost their lives. Others were hospitalized.

Millions of gallons of water, rushing down from a broken dam Wednesday night, cut a path through the center of the business district and touched off a boiler explosion at a cord-manufacturing plant.

Damage Is High
Damage was estimated initially at $2 million and $3 million. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., said in Washington that he has been notified that Norwich—his home town—has been designated a disaster area by the Small Business Administration. Schools were ordered closed.

Juniata River Is Still A Threat

HARRISBURG (AP)—Flooding along the Juniata River watershed diminished Thursday, but a threat of further inundation from jamming ice remained.

Chief state hydrologist O. D. White forecast that the water levels along the Juniata would drop more than two feet by Friday.

Hogan Is Indicted For Murder

DOVER, Del. (AP)—The Kent County grand jury had indicted Thomas Newstead Hogan, 47, Westville, N. J., for first degree murder in the fatal shooting Jan. 21 of Sara Williams, an International Textile Corp. employee.

Miss Williams was killed on the steps of her apartment after, police said, she apparently spurned Hogan, ending a long romance.

The indictment was handed up Wednesday. Hogan is now in the New Castle Correctional Institution but may return to the Kent prison during his trial. He has made attempts on his life in both institutions, police said.

Twice before the slaying, Hogan had been arrested by Dover police and warned to keep away from Miss Williams.

Lenten Meditation

By REV. WESLEY CROWTHER
Pastor, Middle Smithfield,
Shawnee Presbyterian Church

ONE OF THE reasons why so many people do not understand this season of the Christian year is that they do not understand what God has done.

It is not clear to them that 1900 years ago Man was completely estranged and separated from God. It is evidently also not clear that God in one tremendous act of love sent His own Son into the world to die on a Roman cross that Man might no longer be estranged or separated from God.

This is what the Apostle Paul meant when he said, "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself." Put simply, — the truth is this, — on the cross we meet the mightiest power there is to redeem and change life, and to lift us above the sins that claim us.

save them? I've sent a flood, I've sent plagues, I've sent prophets, and still they sin. What can I do to deliver them?
God, in the play, is a picture of compassionate concern, and as He stands by the window a shadow falls on the wall beside Him. "Who's that?" He asks. "Whose shadow is that?" And Gabriel replies: "That's Hosea." Hosea, — the prophet who loved his wife, and she was unfaithful. She deserted him and shamed him, but in the end, in suffering and love he brought her back home to help her rebuild and renew her life.
"Does that mean God must suffer too?" the Compassionate Watcher at the window asks. "Yes," says Gabriel, "that's what it means." Then comes the climax in the next scene. God, still looking down from the window of His heavenly office, says with anguish: "I see a young man carrying a cross up a hill."
When we begin to understand this suffering Love on a cross, when we begin to realize the limit God went to in order to "reconcile us unto Himself," it ought to give us a new sense of dedication in the living of lives.

Strike Ties Up France

PARIS (AP)—Union resistance stiffened Thursday as a nationwide strike of France's nationalized coal industry moved toward crisis stage. Some factories closed for lack of fuel; others reported they were operating on emergency reserves.

The three major unions representing 200,000 coal miners ordered continuation of the strike for better wages and shorter hours despite a government plea to return to the pits. The strike began last Friday.

There were signs of growing labor unrest in other sectors of the economy as support for the miners built up among other unions. This was the first major head-on clash between President Charles de Gaulle's government and France's organized labor bloc. At stake was the government's prestige.

The coal mine unions demand an 11 per cent wage boost and a work week cut from 46 to 40 hours. The government has offered a 5.7 per cent wage increase spread out over the next year.

Strike leaders say the miners will not go back to the pits until the government at least opens negotiations on the demands. The government says it will not discuss wages and hours until the miners go back to work. It has threatened stern measures if the miners do not obey a back-to-work draft order.

Two factories in the Marseille area closed down when coal reserves ran out. Some other textile, brick and paper factories reported they were on emergency reserves. The government-owned gas and electricity and railroad industries were not immediately threatened by a coal shortage.

Premier Georges Pompidou will make what his office called a fire-side chat to the nation over radio and television Friday night to explain the government's position.

Rusk Says Many Cubans Want To Flee Homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Thursday several hundred thousand Cubans have indicated their desire to flee the Red-ruled island.

But of more immediate concern to the United States are the thousands of Latin Americans who want to get into Cuba so they can learn the ways of subversion and guerrilla warfare and take their lessons back home.

President Kennedy is expected to stress this problem at his March 18-20 meeting with the presidents of six Central American republics in Costa Rica.

Rusk said of the current situation under the rule of Fidel Castro: "The economic situation is grim. There is evidence of great and growing discontent on that island."

Speaking on a taped AFL-CIO radio interview program, Rusk did not disclose the basis for his claim that several hundred thousands have indicated a desire to leave Cuba.

But he noted: "The fact that a couple of hundreds of thousands of Cubans have given up all their material possessions and left Cuba to seek freedom abroad since the beginning of this present regime would indicate that Cuba is not a satisfactory place to live now."

Castro has imposed increasingly strict restraints on emigration and many of the refugees who have reached the United States have had to resort to perilous flight in small boats.

Economy Dropped
Rusk spoke particularly of Cuba's agricultural plight and said that from a relatively prosperous economy Cuba's has dropped to a typical Soviet satellite economy "of the sort that we have seen in East Germany, North Viet Nam and other places."

John A. McCone, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told a congressional committee last week that 1,000 to 1,500 Latin Americans were trained in sabotage and guerrilla tactics in Cuba last year and the flow is continuing this year.

President Kennedy referred again in his Wednesday news conference to that threat. And the United States is reported stepping up its efforts to have the Latin American governments place more effective restrictions on such travel to Cuba.

State Department officials said Thursday they could not discuss for publication just what suggestions it may be passing along to its hemisphere neighbors, since the matter is a delicate one, involving national sovereignty.

Congress Digs Into N-Testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid loud political overtones, Congress dug deeper Thursday into the techniques for detecting secret underground nuclear weapons tests.

The Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy was told that low-level explosions might be hidden even with on-site inspection.

The hearing was enlivened by an exchange of near-shots between Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., the committee chairman, and Rep. Craig Hosmer, R-Calif. Meanwhile, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged in the Senate that the United States withdraw its negotiators from the test-ban talks at Geneva.

In a prepared Senate speech, Goldwater asked whether "the administration is engaged in an attempt to arrange a test ban without any inspections."

Then he answered: "When you look at the concessions we have already made in this area, you can see we are certainly headed in that direction."

Unearth Two Roman Caskets

ROME (AP)—Workmen bulldozing a basement for a building six miles north of Rome have uncovered two perfectly preserved Roman marble caskets dating back to about 300 A.D.

One casket is 8½ feet long, the other is a little shorter. The larger casket was carved with an elaborate relief depicting some of the feats of Hercules.

Panel Deliberates Nearly Three Hours

(Special To The Daily Record)

SCRANTON—A federal court jury last night found M. Sgt. Robert E. Schoonover, 41, of 32 Lackawanna Ave., East Stroudsburg, guilty on charges of using the mails to defraud the United States and uttering a $20.50 check.

The panel deliberated less than three hours before reaching the verdict against Schoonover of Co. A. 109th Infantry, 28th Division, Pennsylvania National Guard.

Schoonover, who remained free in $1,000 cash bail posted after an indictment was returned against him earlier this year, has five days in which to file for a new trial and to set aside the jury verdict.

His counsel, Atty. Edwin Krawitz, said the trial plea would be taken under consideration. If an appeal is taken, it will delay sentencing until arguments are heard and a court decision rendered.

Three Of Six Counts
The jury of nine men and three women found Schoonover guilty in three of the six counts of the indictment.

The panel returned a guilty verdict in count two of the indictment which charged Schoonover with unlawfully uttering as true a forged U. S. treasurer's check dated June 29, 1959, in the amount of $20.50 and payable to Russell O. Frederick, bearing the forged endorsement of Frederick with intent to defraud the U. S., knowing same to be forged.

Schoonover also was found guilty of counts five and six, which charged him on or about June 15, 1959, and Dec. 31, 1959, with having devised a scheme to defraud the U. S. and obtain money for property by fraud.

Changing the mailing address of Russell O. Frederick and Earl W. Everett to c/o of Schoonover, at the defendant's home address.

The allegations in the indictment charge Schoonover with having devised a scheme which included submitting a new mailing address to the finance and accounting office of the U. S. Dept. of the Army on a National Guard Bureau armory drill payroll voucher, knowing that the address was not that of the payee.

Heavy Penalty
Under the law, Schoonover could receive a fine of $1,000 and/or 10 years in prison, or both, on the uttering charge.

The statute for using the mails to defraud carries a $1,000 fine and/or five years, or both, on each of the counts.

The jury found Schoonover innocent of forging the $20.50 check payable to Frederick, a former guardman with Co. A, and with forgery of the Everett check for $28.70. Everett was also once a member of the National Guard unit.

Explains Legal Points
The jurist explained that if the alleged acts were done voluntarily and purposely one could be found guilty and punished as a principal.

One juror asked if the panel would have to find the defendant guilty on all counts to which Sheridan replied the defendant could be convicted on some counts and acquitted on others.

Sheridan told the panel it was necessary to find the defendant willfully associated himself with a criminal venture.

Government testimony was that checks of Co. A personnel were diverted to other channels.

First Sgt. Vincent Marek, Jr., of Tannersville, also of Co. A, entered a no contest plea of forgery, using the mails to defraud and false statement charges and will be sentenced later.

Marek faces the loss of his civilian job in a full-time post at Co. A headquarters in East Stroudsburg, reportedly paying about $7,000 annually. He is on leave status.

Gerald E. Shanley, Jr., former guardman, former commanding officer of Co. A, faces trial on charges similar to those against Marek at a later date.

Jury Polled
Atty. Krawitz, following the verdict, asked that the jury be polled. Deputy Clerk Kenneth Mulholland polled each of the jurors and each upheld the verdict read earlier.

Atty. Krawitz took almost two hours to close his argument, in which he asked that his client be found innocent. Asst. U. S. Atty. Carlton M. O'Malley Jr., took less than a half hour in summarizing his case and said the government had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Schoonover was guilty as charged.

The jury asked to see the exhibits at 3:45 p.m. and shortly thereafter sent Judge Sheridan a note seeking to know "if aiding and abetting constitute forgery."

Walter Introduces Bill Aimed At Draft Dodgers

Special To The Daily Record
WASHINGTON — Representative Francis C. Walter (D-Pa.) and Richard H. Poff (R-Va.), chairman and ranking minority member of the House Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization Services, yesterday introduced identical bills designed to solve the situation created by the Feb. 18 decision of the Supreme Court.

Under this decision, persons departing from or remaining outside the United States in time of war or national emergency for the purpose of evading military service shall not lose their American citizenship.

Revoke Citizenship
Under the Walter-Poff bill, the courts in which a draft evader is convicted under the Universal Military Training Act will revoke and cancel the citizenship of any native-born or naturalized citizen alike. Loss of citizenship would not affect the wife and children of the expatriated person.

The bill further provides that no person remaining outside of the United States after having been ordered for induction into the armed forces of the U.S. shall be issued a passport or have his passport extended except for the sole and exclusive purpose of returning to the United States forthwith.

"The Walter-Poff bill," Rep. Walter said, "while giving the draft evader the full protection of the Constitution's 'due process' clause, would restore to the statute books a law passed by the House and Senate unanimously, which was stricken by the slim majority of the Supreme Court. The Congress will reassert this previously demonstrated conviction that persons unwilling to perform their duty to this country in time of need renege their allegiance to the United States by their own conduct."

"This bi-partisan legislation," Rep. Poff said, "illustrates the non-partisan nature of the issue involved. I am honored to join with the author of the Walter-McCarran Act in defense of its critical clause. Even the majority of the Supreme Court which struck down this clause will be able to find no fault with this legislation."

Jobless Picture Is Brighter
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment has climbed back to more than 6 per cent of the work force, it was announced Thursday amid new appeals that Congress quickly cut taxes to stimulate the economy.

The Labor Department reported that unemployment rose unexpectedly in February by 236,000 to 4,918,000, a figure nearly 400,000 higher than in February 1962.

Employment continued its gradual rise to new record levels, increasing by 423,000 to 66,338,000, highest February job total so far.

The seasonally adjusted rate, which had risen from 5.6 per cent of the work force in December to 5.8 per cent in January, rose to 6.1 per cent in February—the highest rate since November 1961.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz discounted the employment rise, saying when it is seasonally adjusted, it represents little difference from the job total last August.

The 5-4 decision of the Supreme Court has caused widespread apprehension in the entire nation, as evidenced by the heavy flow of Congressional mail. Rep. Walter's first reaction to the decision called it "an insult to every American who has borne arms in defense of his country, as well as to the families of those who lost their lives in defense of the United States."

Under the Walter-Poff bill, the courts in which a draft evader is convicted under the Universal Military Training Act will revoke and cancel the citizenship of any native-born or naturalized citizen alike. Loss of citizenship would not affect the wife and children of the expatriated person.

Westminster Choir To Appear Here

THE WESTMINSTER Choir, one of the best-known choral groups in the world, will appear here on Thursday, March 14, at 8 p.m. at East Stroudsburg State College Auditorium under the direction of Warren Martin.

The concert will include works from as far back in history as Thirteenth Century France and as recent as Twentieth Century America. Among the 14 composers represented will be Palestrina, Mozart, Debussy, Vaughan Williams and Copland.

Westminster Choir, which the late Arthur Rodzinski once called the Stradivarius of choral groups, has earned fame far beyond its native shores, having appeared in most of the key cities of Europe, Asia, the Orient, Canada and Cuba, as well as the United States.

Three times Westminster Choir has been commissioned to fulfill the functions of good-will ambassadors. Former President Herbert Hoover and the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt each bestowed this honor. More recently, the choir completed a five-months globe-circling tour sponsored jointly by American National Theatre and Academy and the Department of State.

Founded 1921

Founded in 1921 by Dr. John Finley Williamson, the choir is composed of students in Westminster Choir College, Princeton, New Jersey.

The 40 singers of this celebrated group are students in their late teens or early twenties whose rigorous training schedule is not unlike that of an Olympic team.

They are chosen for beauty of voice, musical ability, and "outgoing personality," and their individual talents are blended into a singing organization which has for more than 40 years delighted audiences in the United States and abroad in concert halls, churches, radio and television broadcasts and appearances with major orchestras.

Jewish Festival Starts Tomorrow

THE FESTIVAL of Purim will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday for members of Temple Israel with the reading of the Megillah. Following the services, refreshments will be served.

Services will be held in the synagogue at 8 p.m. today, followed by a Purim seminar conducted in the vestry room by Rabbi Bernhard Presler. An Oneg Shabbos will follow. Saturday services will be at 7:15 a.m.

In honor of Purim, the temple school will hold its annual party Sunday, to which parents are invited. The masquerade will be at 10:30 a.m. in the temple, followed by the carnival in the vestry room.

The story of Purim as told in the Book of Esther, reads like a fairy-tale. It takes us back some twenty-four hundred years to the land of Persia, ruled by a king named Ahasuerus, where there lived a wicked man named Haman. As Prime Minister and a special favorite of the King, Haman became more proud and vain with each passing day. So vain did he become, that he commanded that everyone who passed must bow down before him.

One man alone refused to bow to Haman, that man was a Jew named Mordecai, who declared, "I bend the knee before G-d alone, the only living One in Heaven above." Hearing this, Haman was so angry that he decided to kill not only Mordecai, but all the Jews in the Persian Empire. He then went to the King and tricked him into giving his seal of approval to the evil plan.

At that time, the Queen of Persia, who was a Jewish lady whose great beauty had attracted King Ahasuerus. Orphaned at an early age, Esther had been brought up by Mordecai, who was her cousin. Now, as she learned from him what about to befall her defenseless people, at great risk to her own life, she summoned up courage to ask the King for help. When Ahasuerus heard the full story, he was furious at Haman for having deceived him. But since he had already signed the decree giving Haman's men permission to attack the Jews, the only way he could help was to command that the Jews be allowed to arm and defend themselves. With G-d's help, they did this successfully, while Ahasuerus had Haman put to death on the very gallows that Mordecai had intended for him.

It was Haman who really named the holiday. Eager to choose the best day for his evil plan, and being superstitious he threw lots, a kind of dice known as purim in Hebrew. The numbers on the lots were thirteen and twelve, which he interpreted as the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, Adar. He therefore commanded that the massacre be carried out on that day. When the thirteenth of Adar came, however, the Jews were prepared. The next day they celebrated their victory. Ever since that time, the holiday has been called Purim. It is celebrated on the fourteenth day of Adar, which falls in February or March by our modern calendar. On Purim eve in the Synagogue, it is traditional to read the Book of Esther (in Hebrew, the Megillah). At every mention of Haman's name, the children stamp, clap and make all manner of noise with their Purim greggers (noise makers). In this fashion, they symbolically blot out Haman's name and the memory of his evil. The next morning when the reading is concluded, the Jewish people, with prayers of thanksgiving, express their gratitude that faith proved triumphant over hatred.

In many ways, Purim has the spirit of a social event. There are carnivals and parties, costume plays and dances and last but not least hamantaschen, delicious three-cornered pastries, intriguingly filled with jam or poppy seeds. Although Purim is a day of triumph, the Jews realize amid all their gaiety, that Haman's defeat was but a temporary one. For in every age, they have witnessed how selfish men eager for power have tried to destroy whatever people or groups stood in their way. In their hunger, these dictators forget the law of G-d and spread hate and distrust, turning one people against another. Purim is a happy reminder, however, that while evil may seem all-powerful at times, it can be defeated if people of good faith work together.

Easter Seals Campaign To Aid Crippled

MORE than 15,000 letters with Easter Seals today were in the hands of Monroe County residents.

The concentrated drive to help the county's crippled children and adults was kicked off yesterday when U. S. mailmen delivered "the goods" to every home in Monroe.

Mrs. Ruth Brown, Easter Seals campaign chairman, said yesterday the drive for funds will run until April 14.

Monroe County's Crippled Children's and Adult Society aids the handicapped of the area with monies received in the drive which ends on Easter Sunday.

One of the main projects of the local organization is the summer therapy encampment for boys and girls at sites throughout the state.

Forty volunteer workers have been working the past two weeks preparing the material for Monroe County's residents.

Under the leadership of Dr. James Reed, president of Monroe County's Crippled Children and Adults Society, the volunteers put together the information and seals package at nightly sessions.

It is the hope of Mrs. Brown and Dr. Reed that this year's drive will bring in a bigger amount of money "so that more crippled children may benefit from the summer therapy sessions."

Mrs. Travis Seeks E-Burg Council Post

MRS. ANN M. Travis yesterday announced that she will be a candidate for reelection as councilman in East Stroudsburg's Fourth Ward in the May election on the Republican ticket.

She is currently serving as vice president of council, a post she has held for two years. In announcing her candidacy, she reported she has been very active in disposing of the old borough lockup and replacing it with offices for the mayor and other borough officials.

She was also instrumental in getting a water supply to residents in higher areas of the borough such as E. Broad St. extension and the area east of Smith St. where a number of new homes have been built.

"In my term of office I have never missed a regular or special meeting of council, nor have I ever missed a committee meeting held to discuss borough affairs," she said in making her announcement.

She says her platform is to encourage more industries and more employment while holding taxes down.

The Unknown Factor

Perhaps one reason the country isn't moving ahead as fast as it should is that we're all waiting to see what will happen. More than two years ago we elected a new Administration, which told us in the campaign and has been telling us in message after message ever since that big things are about to happen.

The economy is bumping along on a plateau. We all know by now that a wrong business decision can have terrible tax consequences, and businessmen would be foolish to make some kinds of decisions until a new tax law is written.

Collective bargaining seems to have been slower and to have resulted in more strikes lately. Could it be that the parties involved are reluctant to move ahead and settle until they see whether the frequent (but not regular) interventions of the Labor Department and Presidential boards might avail them a bit more?

Could it be that some communities are hanging back when they are clearly aware of the need for local public works, waiting to see whether the Congress will put through school building subsidies and additional aid to purely local facilities like sewers and courthouses?

Government is now the largest institution in America by far, and each of its actions is felt by all other institutions, all businesses and all individuals. We all have our private decisions to make, and there are many local and personal puzzles, while the largest factor (what the Federal Government will do) remains unknown.

Anyone who suspects he may be subsidized, he investigated, he taxed at a new rate or on new principles, get a go-ahead from a bureau or be denied one, be permitted to merge or be enjoined from merging, have his quota raised or lowered, grow more or less wheat or expect any other change in Federal attitudes toward what he's doing will naturally procrastinate a little.

And Washington is swarming with contending theorists, with many on the left proposing vast change in a hurry.

Opinions Of Other Editors

The Two Communisms

What is the world going to be like with two competing systems of communism, one talking peaceful conflict and the other revolution by force?

This is the question to ask following the latest polemics from Communist China. The division between Moscow and Peking now stands fully established.

In the past, ideological disputes like this occurred within the Soviet Union. They were settled by purge. There was always one Communist philosophy in power; others were suppressed or simply decapitated.

Now there are two, each in a position of power. A country like Cuba can choose whether to embrace the one or the other, or to straddle. So can an alien Communist Party such as that in, let us say, Indonesia or Venezuela. The choice may be influenced by the fact that Russia can supply more aid to a country like Cuba than China can. But the Chinese Communists are doing their best to compete with aid, too. They managed to keep up shipments to various neutralist countries, even recently when they were deep in economic trouble at home.

Furthermore, China seems to be aiming at Asian countries especially. Here it has the advantage of being closer than the Russians, and more feared.

The West has rejoiced at the split in the Communist world while it has been developing. But this ought to be, in the Gilbert and Sullivan phrase, modified rapture. The assorted rebels of the world have two kinds of communism, each backed by a powerful government, to follow or collaborate or flirt or trade with.

The one, based on Moscow, can direct communism and popular fronts and the blandishments of coexistence among the advanced countries where violence has little or no support. The other, based on Peking, can foment trouble in the less stable underdeveloped world. Emerging countries at various points in the political spectrum can straddle or select or alternate.

The West has a divided opponent but like Janus he has two heads. It is better not to be smug about the new situation.

Juan Waits For A Leader

Miami — A revolution is an abstract thing — until you run into some of the victims thereof. Let's pin the effects of the Castro revolution down to Juan Lima and his wife Suzana, which are the names they prefer to go by in order to keep the heat off relatives in Cuba. Up to August of 1960 Juan was a prosperous small business man in Havana, whose firm had been established in the Nineteenth Century.

Like ninety-five per cent of the Cuban people Juan was disposed to welcome the downfall of Batista. But little things made him uncomfortable.

Sitting last week in the living room of an unpretentious house in West Palm Beach, with his wife, a 90-year-old mother, an aunt, and a dog, Juan said the first thing he had that the Castro movement contained high-placed Communists came from the blouses that some of the Fidelistas were wearing. "They had sleeves without cuffs," he said, "just like the Stalinists used to wear."

Taking counsel among themselves, Juan and his wife decided to play it safe and get some money out to the United States. But even as early as 1960 it was impossible to transfer funds directly from Cuba.

They found a friend who introduced them to an employee of one of the Latin American embassies in Havana. An agreement was made to move some money out under diplomatic immunity. The price: six pesos for every one that was deposited to Juan's account in a United States bank.

Thinking the fee charged by the embassy employee a bit extortionate, Juan tried to get some more money out of Cuba by entrusting it to an American who represented himself as a businessman. The "businessman" vanished with $3,000.

In Florida Juan works as a clerk in a store; his wife sells dresses in a women's wear shop. Their Havana home has been confiscated, and the furniture removed. Juan's business, which had been left to the care of two employees under a power of attorney, was seized by Fidelistas in the autumn of 1960.

"Two men came around on a Friday night with a sack," said

Juan, "and ordered my men to empty the cash register into it. They said they'd be back every week."

While Juan was talking, his dog nuzzled up to him affectionately. "We had left the dog in Havana," he explained, "and my wife grieved for him. So, one day, she went back to Cuba for him."

"I was scared to death every minute," said Suzana, "but I found the dog safely in the care of our old gardener. When I brought him to the plane to leave I was almost stopped because I didn't have a paper for him. But, when I pleaded that I was taking the dog to his rightful owner, they let us through."

Juan and Suzana both grieve for Cuba as they had grieved for their dog. They are pessimistic about ever returning to Havana. Juan doesn't see how Castro is to be stopped without the armed assistance of the United States, and he despairs of getting that. As for the big Cuban refugee colony in Florida, Juan thinks it is too fragmented to function as a unit in the fight against Castro.

"The Miami Cubans," he said, "are split five ways. There is the rift that left Cuba long before Castro. There are the corrupt Cuban business refugees who had paid money to both the Batista party and the Fidelistas. There are the honest business men who paid no protection money."

"Then there are what you call the Fabian socialists — the ones who split with Fidel because they thought he went too far toward Communism. And there are young idealists who wanted an honest society. But no leader comes to put them all together." Juan Lima named two young Cubans who might do the job of welding the refugees into a fighting unit. "One of them is Enrique Llaça Ortiz," he said. "The other is Felipe Rivero. They were both at the Bay of Pigs. But they will have a hard job — and your State Department man, John Crummins, may be pulled to pieces if he tries to help them."

Of one thing Juan Lima is certain, that if Castro isn't pulled down, the United States is destined to lose all of Latin America. He could be right.

Still a Grave Issue

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

On To The World's Fair! — Eyebrows went up in amusement among some of the legislative brethren on Capitol Hill this week when, as they scanned a detailed detail report on recommendations of Governor Scranton for curing Pennsylvania's economic ills, they noticed a section devoted to Pennsylvania's participation in the New York World's Fair of 1964-65.

"That's really carrying it down to the finest nubbin," commented one Senator — with a touch of acidity, but conceding nevertheless that it is a good thought. "After all," he mused, "I guess we've got to start blowing our horn somewhere beside Pennsylvania, and the World's Fair is as good as any."

In a nutshell this somewhat points up the general tenor of reaction among lawmakers to the "Scranton formula" for pulling up Pennsylvania's economic and jobless bootstraps. Even a number of Democratic anti-administration lawmakers conceded that Mr. Scranton covered the entire picture pretty well. "Our only question now is — will it prove as feasible and effective as it looks on paper," was the gist of comment heard from the "anti" side of the aisle. 66 cents And A Billion Dollars

The Pennsylvania Story

Comment On Capitol Hill

— The Legislature's Budget and Finance Committee ("Watchdog Committee") released a tome of sorts this week reporting on the bonded indebtedness of Pennsylvania — which incidentally rounds out to the piddling and certainly not worth bothering about sum of $1,390,745,248.30.

The report contains a semi-detailed breakdown of this total into something like $245,792,248.39 in the General Fund category; $772,327,000 in the category of "authorities," and $372,626,000 for the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission.

However, on the last page of this "billboarded" report is a rundown of a score of items coming under the heading: Long Term Indebtedness and Matured Loans Unclaimed. . . . For example this item is listed: March 30, 1832 a $2,348,680 bond for "canal and railroad" with a maturity date of July 1, 1860. . . . Under "amounts outstanding, December 31, 1962" on this canal and railroad deal is the staggering sum of — 66 cents.

"Sure wish that guy would get his 66 cents and let us clear up our books," snapped one fiscal aide. "After all, it's only been hanging around unclaimed for about a hundred years!"

Capitol Hill's "Parkade" — Two elderly women touring Capitol Hill the other day were overheard discussing a "new building being erected at the northwest end of the Hill area."

"Imagine them putting a parkade right there — why it's simply terrible," tsck-tscked one to the other, briskly shaking her head.

The lady in question was looking at the huge round four-story new State Museum Building — the William Penn Memorial — now abuilding, which when you look at it twice does indeed look somewhat like a parkade at this point.

A passerby overhearing the comment of the elderly women hastened to assure them that it was not a parkade but Pennsylvania's new museum building.

"Well I do declare — you just never know these days what to expect," quivered the older of the two ladies. "I would have thought for sure — but of course — you don't drive cars up steps, do you?" . . . Last time we glanced at the trio, the informing passerby was still standing there with his mouth open.

Scranton Austerity On The Move — Latest (unconfirmed) report concerning Governor Scranton's money-saving austerity program: State employees will repair their own flat tires (patching equipment to be provided — gratis) on state cars, rather than call on the services of a garage or service station!

When there are people I dislike, So often I find this is true: It is much harder to forgive The nice things that they say and do.

I called and felt a little awed, To ask the favor, I had hunted. He hawed and hemmed, then hummed and hawed, But finally, the favor granted.

Fanciful Interlude

Solitude is heading balm
For human's restless soul;
In locale such as this we meet
With our own lofty goal.
The stage is set with fitting props
To suit this self-desire,
The actor, author and director
All clad in our attire.
We thrust ourself into the role
Of hero number one,
Then hail a cloud and scramble on,
And soar till heights are won;
We loose ourselves from Gordian ties
Of life's long graphic date,
And live our most desirous dreams
In such subconscious state.
We need to be alone with self
In this fast living time,
To rest one's body, soul and mind
In isolated clime;
Hail, interlude! Where pregnant thoughts
Are born through our desires,
To cast off worldly burdens there,
And muse on blissful spires.

Thought For A Day

Can I believe on this cold day
The roots of beauty still lie hid
Beneath the snowy tracts, that lay
Ice blankets where life seems Forbidden?
Yet long before two moons have waned,
In beauty will the bluets blow,
And Jack-in-pulpits uncoiled,
Will stand above receding snow.

Bennett Cerf Try and Stop Me

A story President Hoover loved to tell about his predecessor, Calvin Coolidge, concerned the day the Coolidges entertained a missionary at their Northampton, Mass., home before the visitor delivered a scheduled address at the Congregational Church. Grace Coolidge cooked a special dinner, but the missionary wouldn't eat a bite of it — explaining that a meal would spoil his delivery. Mrs. C. was annoyed and stayed home, so Mr. Coolidge escorted the missionary alone to the church. When he came home, Mrs. Coolidge asked, "How did it go?" Cal's laconic reply was: "He might as well have it!"

A bride-to-be showed a friend a list of her proposed wedding guests. "I wonder if you realize," commented the friend, "that you've included nothing but married couples."

"Of course," said the bride-to-be complacently. "We figured that if we invite only married folks, the presents will be clear profit!"

Suggests Wanda Cunningham: "If the mood of your spouse, Before coffee, is irksome, The best thing to do Is get up and perk some!"

The Allen-Scott Report

Chiefs At Odds

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — Defense Secretary McNamara has a new hectic hassle raging right inside his own agency.

It is a furious backstage clash over who is to succeed Deputy Defense Secretary Roswell Gilpatric when he leaves this spring.

Scrambling vigorously for this prize is the "palace guard" of the White House, which is backing Paul Nitze, Assistant Secretary for foreign affairs.

Choice of Pentagon leaders, including McNamara, is Army Secretary Cyrus Vance, who came to the Defense Department from the Senate, where he served as counsel of the Space Committee. Masterminding the "palace guard" is McGeorge Bundy, powerful, ambitious special assistant to the President on foreign affairs.

Other members of the former Harvard dean's clique include Arthur Schlesinger Jr., special presidential assistant; Dr. Walt Rostow, chairman of the State Department Policy Planning Commission, and Averell Harriman, newly named Undersecretary of State for political affairs.

This coterie is bombarding President Kennedy to name Nitze, one of their closely knit group, to replace Gilpatric when he leaves to return to private industry.

A close friend of Vice President Johnson, Vance has enlisted his support for the No. 2 Defense job, which has become the department's main operational command post as McNamara spends most of his time making policy.

The greatly expanded authority is the powerful magnet that has attracted the Bundy clique. They see it as a golden opportunity to enlarge and entrench their already extensive influence.

This undercover aim has been revealed in discussions the group had with the President. They stressed the argument that Nitze's experience in dealing with other departments and foreign governments is needed because of the power of the No. 2 Defense position.

Their inference is clear that Vance is too young and inexperienced to wield the authority McNamara has vested in his Deputy Secretary.

Supporters of Vance are convinced this is not the real reason for the backstage drive against him. They contend the Bundy clique is opposing the Army Secretary because of his close ties with Vice President Johnson and key congressional leaders.

In urging Vance's promotion, McNamara is making much of this very point. He holds that Vance's high standing with these legislators will be a much-needed asset for the Defense Department.

President Kennedy is weighing the pros and cons.

On The Inside — The Bundy group, now reaches into almost every field of foreign policy, is taking full credit for Harriman's promotion from Assistant Secretary for Far Eastern Affairs to the State Department's No. 3 job.

In effect they are indicating that Harriman will be their "Secretary of State" with Secretary Rusk assuming an increasingly ceremonial role.

As spokesman of the "palace guard," Bundy, who operates what has come to be known as "the little State Department," is passing around word that Harriman will be in charge of (1) policy decisions on Southeast Asia, (2) the India-Pakistan dispute, and (3) negotiations on Berlin.

Significantly, Harriman has recommended to the President that William Bundy, brother of the potent White House assistant, be named to the 71-year-old diplomat's former State Department position.

Social Whirl — Mrs. Perle Mesta, noted "hostess with the mostest," is well up in the 60s, but she is joining the youth movement — socially speaking. Attired in a smart, knee-length gown, the enterprising "society queen" gave a hootenanny party for a throng of Georgetown University students. Entertainment feature of the evening was a group of folk singers whom Mrs. Mesta, imported from New York bistros. In addition to the students, her guests also included such well-known youths as Senators Frank Church, D-Idaho, George McGovern, D-S. Dak., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Maureen Neuberger, D-Ore. This marked preference for Democrats is being viewed as further evidence that Mrs. Mesta is trying to win her way into the good graces of the Kennedy administration — after supporting Nixon in 1960. . . . Of all places, the buffalo is staging a renaissance on the Washington social scene. Buffalo coats, roast buffalo and "buffalo-burgers" highlighted an All States Bazaar staged by a women's club. This ingenious innovation went over big because a large crowd attended, including many members of the foreign diplomatic corps.

There is nothing more valuable than having a dry run when you are about to be host to your king. That seemed to be the idea behind the huge reception held by Morocco's new ambassador, King Hassan II visits Washington later this month, so Bengelouan apparently thought it would be a good idea to have a large party to gain some first-hand experience in preparation for his monarch's forthcoming trip. The entire diplomatic corps and numerous other officials attended the affair, and everything went off well, including much delicious free-loading. . . . A giant swan carved from ice and surrounded by flowers was the striking centerpiece of a lavish buffet at the reception Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. Earle Wheeler gave in honor of the commander in chief of the Argentine army. . . . Retired Supreme Court Justices, Stanley Reed and Harold Burton, were guests at the party by Nepal Ambassador Prasad Koirala to celebrate his country's independence.

DEAR ABBY: What, in your opinion, is a good line of work for a girl to get into if she is interested in getting a man?

ANXIOUS

DEAR ANXIOUS: Nursing — a man loves a girl who knows how to rub his back. Air line stewardess — where else can you find a man already strapped down?

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a good woman except for one thing. She is a lousy cook. Everything she makes tastes the same. She smokes while she cooks and ashes fall into the food. I am always finding something in my dinner that doesn't belong there. One night the supper is undercooked and the next night it's burned. She hasn't cooked a good meal since I married her and it's been six years. Any suggestions?

INDIGESTION

DEAR INDIGESTION: Your problem didn't originate in the kitchen, and chances are it can't be solved by me in my mailbox. A woman who doesn't care enough about her husband to TRY to put a good meal in front of him needs more help than I can give her in a letter. If there is a marriage counselor in your area, invite him to dinner.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me how you can keep an old witch of a mother-in-law out of your house? This one has had four husbands. Buried one, divorced two, and drove the fourth one crazy. (No joking — he is in a mental institution.) She comes over every day, uninvited, and orders everybody around. She talks incessantly, and criticizes everything and everybody. She has two other children who are

Cuts Own Pay
SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—In one of his first acts, newly inaugurated President Juan Bosch slashed his own pay from 5,000 pesos to 1,500 pesos a month and halved the salaries of his ministers to 1,000 pesos a month, his party reports. The peso is valued officially at $1.

HANDING IT OVER—Maj. Ernest Kelly, right, Tobyhanna Army Depot's Finance and Accounting Officer, who retires later this month, presents his successor, Capt. Saul Lazevnick, Mt. Pocono, with money bag containing non-negotiable waste paper. Gag was suggested by photographer to symbolize change of "money command" at depot. It would take many more bags to hold millions of dollars the depot will spend in area this year.

HYDRONIC HEAT FOR RAMBLING RANCH HOUSES
A modern hydronic heating system overcomes the serious heating problem created by some modern house designs, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Spread-out rambling ranches particularly need the heat-carrying power of water to adequately warm the far-reaching extremities of the structure.

THE average home contains numerous hiding places for trash and unwanted items. Sooner or later, family members are tempted to fill them. It's a dangerous practice says the Institute for Safer Living — gives fire an ideal nesting place and results in nearly 8 percent of all dwelling fires each year.

The House Of The Week

Colonial Grace Highlights Popular Split

By Jules Loh

COLONIAL ELEGANCE: This up-to-date split level has four bedrooms (five, if needed) and two and a half baths. A long covered front porch, nicely styled gabries, double door main entry and accents of stone provide a homey elegance with a classic colonial flavor.

FLOOR PLANS: The basic area of the house, that covered by the roof, is 1,660 square feet. The foyer level provides an additional 865 square feet of living area. Over-all dimensions of the house are 76 feet wide by 35 feet deep.

Are You One Of The 10 Million?

HAVE you taken a look at your refuse storage area lately?

If not, today might be a good time to do so. Health officers say that more than 10 million households need an old garbage can replaced, or an additional one to serve a larger family.

The average family needs three fire and rat resistant galvanized steel garbage cans, according to health officials. Homes with sink disposers require at least one garbage can for bones, bottles, cans and other items that can not be handled by a disposer.

It is important that garbage cans be kept covered at all times. This keeps out rats, mice, flies and dogs. It also lessens the fire hazards, since the covers would contain any blaze in the fire-resistant can.

In checking the storage area, consider good appearance as well as fire safety and proper sanitation. Many handymen have built a neat storage rack for their garbage cans. This can be painted to improve the general appearance. The street address also can be painted on the cans and covers to make identification an easy matter.

It only takes a few minutes a week to keep the refuse storage area neat and clean.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

"So that's what was wrong with me on Wednesday," was a comment I got from a lot of people, who evidently found my excuse of not being able to function efficiently, mentally or physically, on account of the low oxygen content of a low barometer as handy as I did.

The problem is that there should have been a corresponding rise in efficiency yesterday, but if so, I didn't notice it particularly, did you? I felt better but hardly ambitious, and quite content to be a passive observer.

Anything but passive was Lori Strauss. In writing the stories for "The Baby's Named," I always carry on a running commentary to myself. "I'll bet they wanted a girl," if it happens to be a fourth boy; or "Five babies in five years, wow!" or "How nice to have one old enough to be a built-in babysitter," if there are older children.

So when I came to the baby whose parents and grandparents all were from Newark or New York, I wondered "How Come?" Fortunately, the mother explained on the back of the card that with the baby not due until the end of April, she and her husband had looked forward to the company's winter weekend in the Poconos.

"We all looked forward to an action-packed fun weekend," she wrote, and added "It certainly was! ! !"

And Mrs. Paul Barry added to her church report the fact that she's been shoveling all the snow from the driveway into what she calls her "weed" bed with the thought that she was burying the plot to have enough snow left for the dry spells, come July or August.

If we're going to have a July this year. Not waiting to seek Bill and Kay Tarr took off in a flurry for Florida this week, and the Fontanellas are planning to leave on Saturday.

For those of us who are sticking it out through necessity not more faith, I might point out that the Junior Women are already planning the Laurel Ball, the high school seniors are visiting the college campus, the seventh and eighth graders are far enough along in the school year to be having their Spring party—so I guess maybe this winter will finally end after all.

Get Off On The Right Foot For Popularity On Job

By Roberta Fleming Roesch

EVER feel you're off on the wrong foot when it comes to getting people at work to like you?

We find, in talking to working people, unexpected numbers who admit that, one way or another, they could do much better when it comes to being popular while they're on the job.

Asked Why

So we made it our business to talk to cross-sections of employees and ask them why, in the places where they work, some men and women are off on the wrong foot and not well liked.

Here are some answers we received—and some things for you to avoid if you feel you're not making out very well with the people with whom you work.

Dreary Man

"The most unpopular man in our office got that way by being so dreary he never says anything new," one secretary told us.

"Every time it rains we can count on him to say the same unoriginal thing. And he never lets us down either, when it comes to announcing to everyone that the day is a good one for ducks!"

Bossy Worker

"The woman who's most disliked at our place is a completely unbending woman who expects everyone to think and act as she does and when they don't, she gets mad," a department store saleswoman said.

"The joker who constantly makes cracks about everybody else's work is the guy who's on the downgrade in our department," a typist revealed. "Right now, we have one who's driving us crazy because he thinks he's being so clever with his 'Well, look who finally did it!' any time anybody does a decent job."

"I think the most deadly person on the job is the bored, tired type who makes everyone else feel that way," another girl said.

"And an equally deadly type is the person who's forever giving unsolicited opinions on your weight, your appearance and chided in."

Actually, the comments ran the gamut. Some employees

Heart Assn. Speaker At Soroptimists

The bulk of the money raised by the Heart Assn. goes into research, Mrs. Dorothy Oliver, executive director of the Eastern Pennsylvania Heart Assn., explained to the Soroptimist Club at their meeting held at the Penn-Stroud Hotel with the president, Stella Shade presiding.

The Heart Assn. does not pay for heart surgery or medication, she explained because of the prohibitive costs of these operations. At present there are 78 rheumatic fever patients in the three counties which she represents, with a rheumatic fever program to help the financially needy.

Cases handled by her are referred to the State Rehabilitation Center, she explained where the state can sometimes help financially with operations when the patient is over 16 years of age.

The Heart Assn. also has a speakers bureau to furnish speakers and slides to organizations on request and also has booklets on the heart for distribution.

Elsie Logan, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Oliver. At the business meeting, an announcement was made of a Soroptimist Seminar to be held in Philadelphia on March 16. Stella Shade, Betty Nonack and Willita Rogalinski plan to represent the local club.

Family Night Supper For Center Members

Swiftwater — For the first time, since its organization, the entire membership of the Paradise Community Center will get together in a family night covered dish supper Saturday, March 9 at 6 p.m. in the Community Center Building in Swiftwater.

Two cakes have been donated and a Chinese Auction will be held for them. This will be the only money-making item on the agenda—everything else will be free.

Chairman of the supper committee, Mrs. Francis Coffman, suggests that those who wish to bring games or cards may do so, and make it an evening of family fun.

Anyone needing transportation may telephone Mrs. Coffman or her committee: Mrs. Roger Storm, Mrs. Robert Ross or Mrs. Marvin Fontanella. All members, their families and friends are invited!

Let's talk Fashion

Our recipe for the miseries of March: think pink! At least, we've found ourselves feeling much more cheerful since we hunted out some of our handsome pink things and put them in the front window to cast a sort of rosy glow over us all.

There's sort of a going-to-a-birthday party list to pink that reminds us of apple blossoms, pink lemonade, and a nice warm sunset, all of which we're ready for. But even a dull March day would seem rosier with that handsome pink blouse to wear around the house. And that pink and white checked wool coat makes Easter Parade weather seem nearer, even while we tie on a wool scarf to hold our hair on.

But "thinking pink" means more than just a color. The women who are stocking up on our new golf skirts, for instance, are doing more than making sure that they're getting the pick of the crop: they're getting their thoughts out of the winter-scared ruts and pot-holes of the present and into the it-can't-be-too-long-now future where birds sing, flowers bloom, and we're all bushing pink from our first faint sunburn.

World Service Day Observed At Pocono Union

Henryville — One month later, the Pocono-Paradise Women's Society for World Service observed World Service Day on the first Sunday in Lent instead of the original service planned for Feb. 3 but postponed because of repeated snowstorms.

The service was held at Pocono Union Church. Theme was "Members, One of Another." Mrs. Mildred Friday was in charge of the service. Rev. Karl Keller gave the invocation. Mrs. Orpah Beseker was organist in the absence of the church organist, Mrs. Grace L. Succow.

Rev. Harold Cook was the guest speaker. He stressed the importance of the church as the body of Christ on earth. The same needs to which Christ ministered are still the main business of the church, he said, to introduce all people to Jesus as Savior and Lord, urging members not to become too preoccupied with minor needs.

The free will offering will be used for the African Theological fund; United Church evangelism in the Philippines, and mechanical training in Hong Kong, among others.

The March WWSW meeting will be held March 21 in the parsonage when the love offerings will be returned and officers elected.

Sunshine Class Plans For Sale

The Sunshine Class of the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church met at the church parlors this week for a business and social meeting. Mrs. Raymond Smiley led the devotions and conducted the meeting.

Plans were discussed for a rummage sale to be held in early April. Members voted to change the time of the family night supper from February to October.

Mrs. Harry Warrick gave two readings, "Your Second Job" by Dr. Albert Schweitzer, and a humorous reading "Our New Telephone."

Wrapped gifts were passed around with each choosing the package that most appealed to them. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Clair Reynolds and her committee.

Family Fare

by Bobby Westbrook

Shop Wisely To Raise Standards, Juniors Told

The American housewife could raise the family's standard of living by 10 per cent if she shopped like an industrial purchasing agent, Dr. Alfred Sumberg, associate professor of Social Studies at East Stroudsburg State College, told members of the Junior Woman's Club at their meeting at the Stroud Community House this week.

Speaking on "Consumer Problems of the Housewife" he said that the manufacturer wants to produce products the consumer wants to buy at the price they want to pay.

"Be an aggressive consumer," he urged. "Be a comparison shopper and plan for longer term budget." Taking time to be a comparison shopper not only offers the housewife different prices but substitute products at lower prices and reveals new products available. Although misleading the consumer through fraudulent advertising are a problem, the consumer is protected by the Food and Drug Administration of the U. S. Department of Health Education and Welfare, he said.

At the business meeting it was announced that new dancing classes are being started to be held Monday and Thursday nights at 8 p. m. Members interested may call Mrs. Jack Gregory.

A work party to make toys for Project Hope will be held at the home of Mrs. Andrew Secor on March 14. Mrs. Lyle Dixon modeled a white print suit she had made which will be entered in the district sewing contest to be held at the Hotel Sterling, Wilkes-Barre, on March 23.

Mrs. Edward Hunsicker reported a meeting on Pennsylvania Constitution Revision sponsored by the Jaycees and the League of Women Voters.

Sponsor Laurel Ball
The club voted to again sponsor the Laurel Ball to be held June 7 at The Fernwood. Committees will be announced later.

The Fashion Show will be the next club project. It will be held on March 20 at the college dining room with fashions by Smith's.

A white elephant auction was held after the meeting with Mrs. Robert Payne as auctioneer.

Refreshments were served from a tea table decorated for St. Patrick's Day. The hospitality committee included Mrs. Robert Heid and Mrs. Douglas Wallace, chairman; Mrs. Robert Sullivan, Mrs. Walter Peeney, Jr., Mrs. Robert Jenny and Mrs. Robert Gargone.

Scout Square Dance

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

I can't guarantee that if you rub it a genie will pop out to do your bidding. Neither can I swear one will not—for the 1001-Night-Lamp being sold in our Wyckoff Notions department is so identical to those described in "The Arabian Nights" ANYTHING could happen!

These lamps will charm you if, like myself, you never quite grew up and still delight in fantasy. They will charm all youngsters, I know. One Grandmother of our Wyckoff Store Family decided, the moment I showed one to her, that it is just the thing to give her grandchildren for Easter, along with their chocolate eggs and marshmallow bunnies. They will enjoy it, I'm sure, and I am equally confident a great many older persons would welcome one and find it useful.

Working on a flashlight battery (which is sold separately) these lamps are of mottled blue plastic in the familiar "graveyard" design. There are three globes which may be inter-changed as one wishes. Through them the flashlight bulb will cast either a white, blue, or red light, depending upon the mood one strives to set. The lamp can be adjusted to remain on indefinitely, or to go off whenever it is set down and flash on when lifted.

I have never feared the dark... yet on those occasions when I have been a hospital patient, a night light has been of great comfort to me. Children who are fretful and ill, and elderly persons who sleep fitfully, losing their bearings in the night, feel much the same, I am sure. The white light is sufficient to read by if one fears disturbing a roommate, and either color would be a welcoming sight when one enters a darkened house alone. The manufacturer suggests using a number of lamps with different globes to create the mood for a dance party. Any girl wise to feminine wiles will also see the possibilities in having one or two burning in the living room when she arrives home with her favorite date.

Price for the lamp and three globes is 1.98. If a genie does come out of yours, we won't be surprised, and WE WON'T CHARGE MORE. We would simply regard it as another of those happy bonuses that are always coming the way of those who shop WYCKOFF'S.

Clay's Poetry Tops Greenwich Beatniks

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—When your eyes became accustomed to the gloom, you could make out the motto of the house, written on the back wall:
The further the urn, the larger the beard.
Gathered Thursday beneath the sign proclaiming this touching, if confusing, sentiment—and a drawing of what appeared to be a large parrot spanking the posterior of a naked lady—were an assortment of beatniks, sports writers, television types and Cassius Marcellus Clay, the self-proclaimed next heavyweight champion of the world.

The scene was the Bitter End by its manager as a coffee house-night club and by the civilians from the outside world as fair game for the health department. The lights were few and dim, the furniture rickety, the stage backdrop a plain brick wall and the interior decoration might be described as Greenwich Village Precious.

Clay was there to indulge in a poetry battle with some of the Village's foremost beat poets, and to thump a tub or two for his 10-round battle with Doug Jones next Wednesday at Madison Square Garden.
The poetry battle was about a draw.

Both Cringe

Cassius cringed at the poetic efforts of the beats. The beats cringed at the efforts of Cassius. One cretin with straight black hair and about a pound of black goop on her face—consulted as an authentic beatnik—contended that Cassius' work had soul, but she turned out to be a researcher for a weekly news magazine and was disqualified as a judge.
Cassius arrived in the Village just as lunch—cole slaw and chicken wings—was being served.

Poetry Battle

Then the poetry contest got under way.
A gentleman weighing about 106, with a fine head of skin and a thriving beard, was the first challenger. His shoes were shined but his manuscript looked like he had wadded it up and used it for a doorknob.
He read: The Way of Emblems, or Sam the Gambler Talks to a Losing Horse.

Cassius called him "about a four round poet."
Finally, a living doll with baby blue eyes and about six hanks of dirty brown hair hanging down her back—"If you'd wash her off, she'd be beautiful," one spectator said—read an Ode to Cassius.
"Do you have a flag in your palm?" it began.

Holds Copy

Actually, Cassius held a copy of his poem in his palm, and soon he got up to read it.
It rhymed. It was the turn of the beats to squirm.
It was a little difficult for Cassius, since he had his tongue so firmly planted in his cheek, but he went through the poem reading twice.
Here's a sample stanza:
The word's been passed around that I'm a very charming guy.
The greatest fighter that ever lived and I'll gladly tell you why.
My secret is self-confidence, a champion at birth.
I'm lyrical, I'm fresh, I'm smart.
And my fists have proved my worth.
The self-described "Noblest Roman of them all" then accepted his own congratulations, all around.

Martinez Unusual Rookie

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Cleveland's Tony Martinez holds an unusual distinction among major league baseball rookies this spring—he's already been promised the starting shortstop position.
Usually a rookie works through spring training and the exhibition game series striving for a job with his major league club.
Not Martinez. The 22-year-old Cuban showed enough at Jacksonville in the International League last year to convince Manager Birdie Tebbetts that he should be in the Indians' line-up.

"Always I was dreaming of being a major league player some day," says Tony, who began playing as a kid of 10 in his home town of Perico.
And even though Tebbetts says he's going to start with Martinez, the ruggedly handsome looking youngster takes nothing for granted.

More Confident

"I was here for a little while last year," he recalls. "But I had a little sore arm and didn't play much. Most of the time I was just running. After last season, I have more confidence. I have to have. The pitchers here they have to be better."

Tony wasn't due in training camp until March 1 but showed up a few days before, as eager as any rookie, explaining, "I wanted to come early to get started. I wanted to get to know people."

Martinez showed up at his playing weight of 172 pounds. After being the all-star shortstop in the International League and hitting .287 at Jacksonville, he spent the winter playing in Puerto Rico.

Knuckleballs Leave World Of Triandos

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Some men dream of owning a yacht. Others pine for a cute blonde, a quiet life and a coconut palm. In the private dream world of Gus Triandos, heaven is a blissful ball where no pitchers throw knuckleballs.
Triandos is so relieved to have escaped Baltimore and Hoyt Wilhelm that he will ever overlook an occasional knuckler by a Detroit pitcher. Not that he plans to teach any of them how to throw it.

If you have been keeping up on your homework, you must be familiar with Triandos' many losing bouts with Wilhelm. Unlike Floyd Patterson, Gus wants no part of a rematch.
No Good-Byes
Triandos left Baltimore so fast that he didn't even say goodbye to the king-sized mitt that saved his life so many times.
"If it hadn't been for that big glove, I would have been on the disabled list all the time. I was at my wit's end when they came up with that."
When Hoyt reads all these things I've been saying about him, I suppose he'll be mad at me. I'm not mad at him, just happy he is in Chicago and I am in Detroit. Everybody admits he did a great job but let him do it with somebody else.

Sheppard Is Criticized

Liberty Bell Frowns At Racing Chairman

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Liberty Bell Park, Pennsylvania's first pari-mutuel harness racing track, Thursday issued a "declaration of independence" from Lawrence B. Sheppard, chairman of the state Harness Racing Commission.

Michael J. O'Neill, president of Liberty Bell, which opens its doors June 7 for a 50-night meeting, charged Sheppard with attempting to ruin harness racing in the Philadelphia area before it even began.

At his Hanover office, Sheppard said any such declaration "is a matter to take before the commission."

Meeting Set

"We'll see what they say about it," he added. He declined further comment. He said the commission probably will meet within 10 days. O'Neill said in a statement:

Strickland Repeats Little A-A '5' Named By AP

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—"The best all-around small college player in the South."

"The man who makes us go."
"The mighty mite."

Those are capsule comments on Roger Strickland of Jacksonville, Fla., University, All Thresher of Wittenberg, Ohio, University and Mike Wisneski of St. Norbert College, Wis., who top the 1963 college basketball Little All-America team selected by The Associated Press Thursday.

Also impressive
Rounding out the first team in the voting by 54 sports writers and radio-TV broadcast men are two others with impressive credentials, Bill Witacnis of the University of Scranton, Pa., and Jim Boutin of Lewis and Clark, Ore.

Strickland, a 6-foot-5 senior, is a repeater from the 1962 Little A-A. He joins Dick Barnett of Tennessee State and Bob Mahland of Williams as the only 2-time Little All-Americans since the small college selection was started in 1967.

Says Lee Walburn of the Atlanta Journal: "Strickland is the best all-around player in the South's small colleges, perhaps the best including the major colleges."

"Makes Us Go"
Thrasher, a 6-2 junior who led the once-beaten Wittenberg Tigers into the NCAA small college championship tourney "makes us go" in the opinion of Eldon Miller, Wittenberg coach, and Wil Kilburger, of the Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch, says Thrasher is "the finest player among small colleges."

"This then is Liberty Bell's declaration of independence from Lawrence B. Sheppard. We are concerned not so much with Sheppard's conflict of interest as with his interest in conflict, which threatens to discredit harness racing at Liberty Bell before the track opens."

O'Neill said there are four interested parties in racing in Pennsylvania: The public, the state, the horsemen and the stockholders. He said it may be that Sheppard concerns himself with the interest of the state, public and track owners, "but in my dealings with him I have found him to be concerned primarily with what he believes to be the welfare of the horsemen."

THE CHAIRMAN of the State Harness Racing Commission, Lawrence B. Sheppard, is on the spot in a conflict-of-interest controversy. The charge stems from the fact Sheppard is a large breeder of harness horses. Thus, the question: Would Sheppard, as head of the racing commission, be in conflict-of-interest if he and members of his family raced horses at Pennsylvania tracks?

At the moment, politicians and other officials are undecided. There have been three answers from various sources so far—yes, no and maybe.

But one man—and one very close to the situation—who has rushed to the defense of Sheppard is John Brislin of Stroudsburg ID 3, chairman of the Pocono Mountain Harness Horsemen. He flatly declares there is no conflict-of-interest in this matter.

"In my opinion," says Brislin, "Mr. Sheppard has demonstrated over the period of the last 35 years that his primary interest has been the welfare of the harness horse sport and this is his present interest in seeing that harness horsemen receive a more equitable share of the monies paid by the patrons to the tracks."

He continues: "It is Sheppard's contention that the new Pennsylvania pari-mutuel tracks which open for the first time in June of this year should pay back to the horsemen 45 per cent of the track's take."

"Currently, the New York tracks are paying 35 to 40 per cent. The raise in Pennsylvania pursues would bring top-grade horses to Pennsylvania tracks. Naturally, the New York tracks are opposing this most strenuously because they would lose horses."

"This (the raise in purses) would benefit Pennsylvania horsemen and it would filter back to the breeders as well. Because Mr. Sheppard is one of the largest breeders, it has been charged that this would make a conflict-of-interest."

Brislin's comments on this subject are worth repeating because he is no novice in this field of harness racing. In addition to serving as chairman of the Pocono Mountain harness group, he also has raced horses over most of the major tracks in the country, several of which have set various track records.

Also coming to the defense of Sheppard is Gov. Scranton. Sheppard, he says, "has a nationwide reputation as a person who has been greatly devoted to clean, honest harness racing." Sheppard, a Republican, was originally appointed chairman of the racing commission by former Gov. David L. Lawrence, a Democrat. And the contention that Sheppard is in conflict-of-interest is coming from Democratic legislators.

Gov. Scranton appointed Sheppard to his second term in the harness racing post. But he must now be confirmed, as before, by the Senate. And the Senate's Democratic bloc is withholding confirmation of his re-appointment.

"I think it would be a great mistake if Pennsylvania was deprived of this man's experience," says Scranton. The governor said he also intends to name a Democrat to the commission "when I find one who is knowledgeable in this field."

Sheppard owns the 400-acre Hanover Shoe Farm in York County, where he maintains 250 brood mares and 15 stallions. Stallions owned individually and in partnership by Sheppard command stud fees ranging from $500 to $15,000, the latter for champion horse Adios, whose offspring won more than $1 million in 1962.

It is because of this that the conflict-of-interest charges have cropped up. But could it be, actually, that the political atmosphere is clouding the issue?

Sheppard is a man of undeniable integrity. His character has yet to be challenged—either in court or out.

The one question—is it wrong to be head of the racing commission and be a horse breeder at the same time?—has already been raised.

If this is the only question, fine. Let it be settled. But it does seem there is one other question in this issue that has not been asked: Is it wrong to be a Republican?

The Democratic bloc of the Senate has not officially, or publicly, asked this question. But I am.
